Hi, Walker – this is just to remind you that we had briefly discussed ideas for projects Lori Schmidt could work on when she returns to DC. I've got a few ideas which I'm working up with Lisa. Our Deputy General Counsel Elyse Packard had mentioned to me a project from an earlier discussion with OITa that she referred to as WHO Air Quality Risk, possibly related to a commitment from G7 or G20 meetings. Of course WHO's reports on human health risks from ambient air pollution have been very prominent over the last couple of years, raising awareness of the estimated 4 million premature deaths from exposure to PM2.5. And your work with Ted to get WHO to include pollution in the WHO's NCDs is a major milestone on this topic. We were trying to scope out whether there is a specific project w/ WHO on air quality risk, perhaps in relation to G7 or G20 commitments.

Best,
